J. W. Ashman Drowned in Reservoir.

First Missed When His Little Son Found His Garments.

Has Been an Employee of the Salt Lake Brewery for the Past Twelve Years.

J. W. Ashman, 40 years old, of 1145 East Fourth South street, was drowned about $:30 last evening in the reservoir back of Mt. Olivet cometery, used for irrigating lots in the cemetery. Ashman was bathing in the reservoir where the water was nearly eight feet in depth, and it is presumed that he was taken with crampe. No one saw him go down to his death, but his body was recovered within twenty minutes after he was known to have gone into the water, and life was wholly extinct.

A number of boys were bathing at the time on the east side of the reservoir, where the water is quite shallow, and Mr. Ashman went in alone on the west side, where it is much deeper. It was Ashman's own son, a boy 9 or 10 years old, who first discovered that his father was missing. The boy, with some other lads, had strayed to the west bank of the reservoir, when he encountered a

"Why, these are pa's clothes," said he, and then he wondered that his father was nowhere to be seen.

The boy communicated his discovery to two young men, J. E. Tauper and Ed Pierce, who dived into the reservoir and recovered the body. The cemetery sex-ton was notified and those who were about the place worked over the body for some time without results. Dr. Hardy Lynch was also summoned, but he found that there was no need of a physician's aid. He found no evidence of violence, and there is no doubt that the man, probably going into the water when warm, was taken with cramps and Word of the accident was telephoned to the police station, and Capt Bur-hidge, Detectives Chase and Burt and Pairol Driver Seger went out with the patrol wagon and brought the body to the undertaking rooms of O'Donnell & Co., after the officers had investigated circumstances surrounding the fa-Ashman leaves a wife and five chil-and municipal laws committees they stated that they would be satisfied with this arrangement, provided that the police be instructed to bend their energies to the same extent in detecting violations by the restaurant propriteers that they do in catching the saloon men. This means that the restaurants can sell drinks as they are sold in saloons, except that the same must be served with meals, at a yearly license of $100. Hoth saloons and restaurants are to be prohibited from selling liquor on Sunday.

In regard to the drug stores it was agreed that the ordinance provide that they sell no intoxicating drink of any kind in less quantity than one-half plat, this not to be drunk on the premuses. The same rule applies to the drug stores as to saloons and restaurants in relation to selling on Sunday. The City Attorney was directed to draw up an amendment to the present ordinance in conformity to these provisions and to present the same to the Council next Monday night. There is considerable talk of changing the pluns for the parking and paving of Brigham street, it being understood that the property owners on that thoroughture are not entirely pleased with the latest plans adopted, but the committee deformed action until the return of City Engineer Snow, who is now in St. Louis.

It is more than likely that there will be trouble in the courts over the franchise granted by the Council to I, Putnam Duncan to place advertisements on wastepaper boxes on the streets of the city. A petition was presented to the Council Monday nightasking that the grante of this franchise be compelled to remove an advertisement. for a non-union-made clear appearing upon one of these boxes in front of the cigar store of Whittaker & Dallas on West Second South street.

Mr. Duncan says that there is nothing in his franchise preventing him from placing his advertisements where he places and that he will fight the matter. The Councilmen contend that Mr. Duncan gave his word that he would not do this sort of competitive advertising. The matter will be taken up again next week.

WOMAN DYING FROM WORRY

Cannot Provide for Her Little Ones.

Pathetic Story of the Woman Who Fainted Wednesday Night.

Neglected by Her Husband, She Has Been Struggling to Keep Her Brood Together.

"Acute hysteria superinduced by overwork and worry," was the diagnosis made by City Physician Wilcox when ne examined Mrs. M. C. McKenzie,

"I have tried to do washing and I have not the strength even when I can get the work. I am willing to do anything, but the thought that I cannot provide for my little ones is killing me, s the pathetic cry of the poor mother. She suddenly lost the power of speech nd movement while sitting on her own porch Wednesday night and her little on tearfully told the desk pergeant at the Police Station: the Police Station:

"Please, sir, my mother is dead," Mrs. McKebzle was not dead. She could not die and leave her three little children unprotected. By force of will she overcame the hysteria and yesterday was attending to light household duties.

Pathetic Life Story.

Motherless at 3, an orphan at 8, forced to support herself even as a child, mar-ried at 16 to a man whose indifference and cruelty began with the day of mar-riage, a mother at 17, traveling from one mining camp to another, lingering no-where long enough to call her shack "home," mother of one dead and three living children, left destitute by the man who brought her away from friends in her native State, California—such is the life story told by the folial woman the life story told by this faded woman

Still more pathetic is the story mutely Still more pathetic is the story mutely related by her beautiful, pleading, child-like eyes, and her squalld surroundings. One miserable room at 213 East First South street is made to serve for bedroom and all other purposes and is eccupied by herself and her three little ones, the oldest a boy of 10, and two little girls, aged 8 and 4 years. This room is at the back of the adobe dwelling house in which several families reside, each renting a single room. Some solled wall paper, a few clothes behind a sheet hung on the wall, table, bed and cook stove crowded together—these are the sole contents of the cheerless room. Yet sole contents of the cheerless room. Yet even these few necessities are held by precious title of weekly rent.

One week ago she secured a divorce and was awarded $30 per month all-mony, but the award of a court and the enforcement of its decrees are different things.

Came From California.

All the way from California in ouggy with her first baby in her arms. the woman rode with her husband to Utah. In this State her life was a repetition of migrations from camp to camp. In Mercur her husband was hurt fell upon her shoulders. She did wash-ing for the miners and even went to Dry canyon to cook for the men worksympathetic, grew more harsh in his treatment. A month ago he brought the family to Salt Lake, where he left them nd returned to Tooele. Since that time Mrs. McKenzie has been making an most fruitless effort to carn a living for her children.

Clings to Her Children.

"I could not give them up," she said yesterday, sobbing bitterly at the mere thought. "I could not give them up even if I had no place to go and nothing else on earth. They are afraid of their father because of his harshness to me and they will not go to him. I have tried to do washing and I have not the strength even when I can get the work. I am willing to do anything, but the thought that I cannot provide for my little ones is killing me.

"I sent my little son Roy out on the street to hunt work-you know he is only 10-and after he had been gone all day he came back tired and crying bit-terly-'Mama,' he sobbed, 'I don't know the streets, I asked everywhere for work and they don't want me?"

The youngest child is a beautiful little girl with eyes like her mother's. She is perfectly unconscious of the mother's unhappy condition, and came to lay her head affectionately in the mother's lan after which she played about the squalld room with a little yellow kitten.

Banquet in Honor of Two Popular Divines.

Rev. Mr. Richelsen of Westminster Presbyterian church and Rev. Mr. Balley of Liberty Park Methodist church, both of whom leave the city shortly to make their homes elsewhere, were the honored guests at a very enjoyable banquet last evening at the Wilson. One long table was laid in the banquet ball of the hotel, and at this were scated nearly all of the mbers of the association, with their prembers of the association, with their wives.

After disposing of the feast of good things set before them, the guests greatly enjoyed the "feast of reason and flow of soul" which succeeded. Rev. T. W. Pinkerton, chairman of the Ministerial association, was the toastmaster, and while several different subjects were assigned the toastgivers, the thought which ran through all the talks was one of keen regret at the departure of the two young ministers who have done such able work since coming to this city.

The toasts responded to were: "Touch and Go," by Rev. William M. Paden; "The Worker and the Server and the Morker and Wake, "The Problem of the Worker and His Opportunities." Rev. Bruce Kinney, "That Which Remains." Rev. Richard Wake, "Au Revoir," Rev. P. A. Simpkin, Brief remarks were also made by Rev. T. W. Pinkerton, Rev. Mr. Richelsen and Rev. Mr. Bailey.

H. P. Myers of 752 Jordan street, a treet car motorman, while attempting to ross First South street at West Temple ast night, was struck by a big automobile and knocked to the pavement. Myers was stunned for a moment, but was not ser-lously hurt. He was seriously vexed, how-ever, because the driver of the auto went gally on his way, not caring whether the victim was killed on not. Myers declared that if he could apprehend the driver he would prosecute him to the limit, but no witness of the accident could be found who had even noticed the number of the machine. It was considered by some a pscullar irony of fate that the first man to be run down by an automobile in Salt Lake should be a stret car motorman.

WHY HUBBY WAS ON THE BLIND

Mystery of the Hobo in Silk Hat.

Wife Found Him at Farmington With a Weman.

There Was Some Scratching, a Little Hair Pulling and a Reconciliation.

When the Oregon Short Line train from Cache valley pulled into the yards in this city yesterday morning, a middie-aged man of rather striking appearance occupied the "blind baggage." He wore a silk hat, a stylishly cut suit and patent leather shoes and his appearance naturally excited considerable attention. As the train neared the depot the man was seen to jump, rell over several times, and, after recovering his battered silk hat, disappear behind a string of box cars.

Inside one of the coaches two women were busily engaged in conversation One was the wife of the man with the silk hat and the other-well she had hoped to be, but complications arose which dashed her hopes.

The wife boarded the train at Ogden and when Farmington was reached got off. As she alighted she caught sight of her husband and the "intended" board-ing a chair car near the head of the train. About the same time the flickle hubby caught sight of his spouse and instantly made a dash to get away. The "intended" took a seat in the coach and calmly awaited results.

Hair-Pulling Began.

She had not long to wait. With bound the angry wife reached the seat of her rival and a moment later the two were busily engaged in a fight that was not governed by Queensbury rules. The startled passengers, bothe male and fe-male, beat a retreat from the car and watched the proceedings from the door-way. Even the brakemen and conducor refrained from butting in.

For several minutes the two women pulled hair, scratched faces, and went through several other stunts prescribed in the rough-house manual, all the while emitting piercing shrieks and calling each other unkind names. The wife had all the better of the argument from the start and before long had her rival on the mat and all but out. Seizing an umbrella that lay nearby, the angered frau dealt her fallen autacong refrau dealt her fallen antagonist a resounding wallop and then stalked away in search of her trifling companion.

A careful inspection of the different coaches failed to reveal the whereabouts of the husband, who had taken refuge on the "blind" of the baggage car. The train pulled out but he dared not go in-side, so for eighteen miles he was compelled to ride the head-end in true hobo fashion. When the train reached Salt Lake he made his escape as described Explanations Are Made.

Meanwhile the wife had sought her rival and declared a truce. Explana tions were made, letters read, and the situation explained. The husband had lecelved both women, been untrue to his wife and had promised to marry the other woman, who knew naught of his former marriage. There was an apology, a whispered consultation and the fat drummer who sat nearby remarked: "I can see where Mr. Gayboy gets his if that pair ever find him."

When the train reached Salt Lake the two women sought for the trifler with the silk hat and the patent leather shoes, but in vain. With the assistance of an officer they examined every box our in the yard, but the fickle hubby was The women finally gave up the hunt and left the depot.

"But I'll get him yet," declared the wife as she boarded a street car and those who witnessed the melec at Farmwill wager that she carries out her threat.
